A Thornless Cactus.

Mrs. Helen Benners, now residing in Los Angeles, Cal., sends an article about Luther Burbank, the world-famous gardener of California and creator of many new forms of plant life, on seeing a short mention in the JIMPLECUTE about his production of a spineless cactus. It is as follows:

"Scarcely a decade ago Luther Burbank was virtually unknown to the world. He was held in derision by his relatives, in pity by his friends, in scorn by his enemies. He was denounced by scientific men as little less than a charlatan, a producer of spectacular effects, a seeker for the uncanny and abnormal, an enemy to all true scientific progress, a misleading though powerful prophet of a new order of things that could never come to pass. Today Mr. Burbank has become the foremost man in the world in the production of a new and interesting form of fruit, trees, flowers, vegetables, grasses, and nuts.

A FODDER CACTUS.

"For a period of over ten years he has worked with the utmost persistence and skill until at last he has developed a cactus plant which will convert the desert into garden. He has made the cactus thornless, taken from its leaves the hard, woody substance, the spicules, so dangerous to animal life. More than this, he has made it adaptable to any climate. It will thrive on the hot desert, but it will grow with marvelous fecundity when irrigated or when planted in a richer soil.

"But this is not all of the marvel. He has bred this dreaded scourge of the desert, this pariah among plants, until it has become the producer of a delightful, nutritious food for man and beast.

"But not only has the constitution of the cactus plant been cared for so that it needs only to be adopted by the world to become a new source of food supply, but it has in the meanwhile been made so hardy that it will endure the coldest climates, it may be grown from the Equator to the Pole, or as far north as any vegetation can be produced. The new plants preserve their type also, never reverting, but always persisting. There is apparently no degeneracy, no return to its coat of mail, but a steady persistence in its new life-habits and its physical structure."

Conditions Favor the Boll Weevil.

Dallas, March 28.—Vice President E. S. Peters of the Southern Cotton association reached Dallas tonight on his way to Indian Territory points in the interest of the association of which he is an officer. Colonel Peters said:

"These rains have made the planting season three weeks late. The conditions are just right for the boll weevil, because the cotton crop will not mature early enough to get out of his way. The lateness of the season is the strongest kind of an argument for the farmer to reduce his cotton acreage and put in large crops of corn, sorghum, millet and other fodder crops. He should go particularly strong on corn. The best corn crop I ever raised was planted in the latter part of April; the yield was seventy-five bushels to the acre. There's no use deceiving ourselves. The boll weevil is still here. He will be destructively in evidence next fall when the crop matures late. The backward season, because of the rains, extends even to the limits of Southwest Texas. I traveled last week from San Antonio to Hearne and only saw two patches of corn above the ground, and not a bit of cotton."
